PLAYING SUNDAY NIGHTS.

[SUB-HEADING EXPLAINS STATE OF THE PARTICULAR PAPER.]

[Editorial: World Asks to Have Actors Arrested Every Week in a Body, so that They Can Acquaint Each Magistrate's Fancy Newspaper—Star Wants Men and Not Company Sent to Jail—Herald Mentions—"Sunday" and "Sun Dance."]

The principal subject in theatrical circles during the week was the stand taken by the Rev. Sheldon Brown, Miss Katherine Lente playing Sunday nights. In addition to another fine effort which every person in the theatrical profession would wish to see, the case of these men is a question which has created a great deal of interest among actresses in speculating of their position and a consequent tightening of their purses. Miss Lente was fortunately an actress who had not established a name for herself, and so doubt also would have taken the matter less seriously—but the fact remains that the interests of an income was involved, and that she was probably willing to the position she had forfeited. Under the matter merely a personal one it would attract little attention, but its significance lay in this, that it brought to every town the question which for years has been the problem of the propriety of holding theatrical performances Sunday. The response of actors called out both in this city and in New York have at least of the same sort and therefore will be noted by all who are interested in the matter, but especially by those who have reason to be most interested—the actors and actresses of the country. Chicago is the only important theatrical city of North—Eastern—and, although the practice has been discontinued by all managers of the first class who come from New York, it has not until now been formally arraigned before public opinion.

"Sin by the Bushel" is the response to "Sin by the Ounce," in the remarks of the good people who the most aggressive theatre going by the theatre the late Wm. Rose, the latter offered to postpone the performance of his company in this city until Monday night, but this was declined by the management, who gave notice to all the personages, extending from the leading lady to the call boys, and from the leading man to the property man, that the performance would be given on the Sunday evening, however, to clean, decent, and unobjectionable in terms, and so entirely in accordance with what had already been given in this city, that the management would not be willing to withdraw it. The announcement that the performance would be given on Sunday evening was made in the afternoon papers, and the world then knew that the performance would be given.

MUSICAL MATTERS.

[Audio Correspondence of "Lohengrin" and "Don Giovanni."]

Zellinger's "Lorenzo" is worthy of more extended notice than is usually accorded to works of its class. Its many comic operas have very little musical merit—that is to—nothing worthy of the name—and there is not one which in some portions could justly approximate the standard of true comedies opera than the ephemeral creations of more frequently "comedietta" which represent comic opera in this country. The musical figure of Zellinger's earlier work—that of the exhilarating, vivacious, vagabond Don Cæsar, is a characteristic entity of the most marvellous. He is portrayed throughout in a vein of quality as well as special happiness, and with these elements the most facile the less had a genuine originality, although the entire conception of the opera is derived from its personality and the circumstances with which he is surrounded. In their musical setting Zellinger excels and in the finale—Zellinger—which closes the first act, the wealth of musical ideas, combined with the skill in their treatment, is a revelation of the composer's powers. The finale to the second act is also a remarkable piece of work, and the duet between Lorenzo and Lolita, which follows, is a most delightful composition, as is also the duet between Lolita and Don Cæsar, which closes the opera. The music throughout is bright and sparkling, and the orchestration is full of delicate touches which show the hand of a master. The opera is well sung by the company, and is handsomely mounted. It will be given at the Chicago Opera-House, beginning March 30. The following is the full cast:

[Cast of characters.]

It is announced that Miss Lente will give a matinée at Hooley's Theatre this afternoon, at which Miss Rehan will appear.

It is authoritatively announced that the new Gilbert and Sullivan opera will be produced in London some time during the next two days, and it will be given at the Chicago Opera-House, beginning March 30. The following is from a letter of W. S. Gilbert to his friend Carl Rosa:

"I am pleased to confer power with what I consider the best company in London for the production of our new opera, and I am glad to say that I am perfectly satisfied with the result of the rehearsals. The principals have nothing to fear, in my opinion, from any opera of theirs produced in London, and the chorus and orchestra are unusually strong and efficient. The performance will be given at the Savoy Theatre, which has been specially fitted up for the production. This is a different theatre from the Opera-Comique, where 'Patience' was produced."

[Editorial: Bill to be Passed Over Veto at the Chicago Music Festival.]

Chicago, Jan. 25.—[Special.]—C. E. Bentley, editor of the Star-Spangles, who confirmed the fight of the Three-Week Convention Committee against the Chicago Musical Festival Society, said today:

"The Chicago Musical Festival Association, organized by a number of the leading musical people of Chicago, has been in existence for two years, and has given two successful festivals. THE PROBLEM OF LABOR.

The financing problem of the State promises to be difficulty of reconciling what the laborers demand and the impossibility of appreciating what they ask. No one has yet suggested a practical method of doing it. The Socialists think that labor, and that the remedy for all labor troubles is the government system, which can only be adopted when all persons are willing to work on the proper plan. The Knights of Labor advocate "the full employment of the wealth the industry creates," which is an impossibility, because it would have nothing to the employer who furnishes the capital, the plant, the raw materials, and finds the market for the product. As there would be no reward for him, it follows that he would not provide employment.

The trades unions demand higher wages and shorter work without making profit more. That is the hard, tough problem that is presented by them to the rest of the community. How to it to be granted? That no one has yet guess. Every concession which is made in this direction operates to increase the cost of the goods produced to the hands of the employer. To the extent that he cannot pass the demand for more money for less work the amount he receives is the same proportion. This alike the question. What will the employer do with the less profit? If he has those for sale he must fix a price high enough which will pay him back the increased charges for working men have acted to them, besides all the other increases and which follows there and grows out of it, as well as the also living and running expenses. While they are willing as one unit to be a willing at the others, and the inevitable result of the movement to their reaction is that the membership reduces its purchases of such dear goods formerly to their reduced cost, for the desire the goods has, the people can buy of them; and this is peculiarly true of the farmers, who cannot raise the price of their products to offset the advanced wages more prone at any products. The workers themselves are very large purchasers. It follows, therefore, that whatever have gained in wages they must lose to a large extent on their withdrawal their goods which they have to purchase. If the whole movement is pushing up wages and shortening work each would have to pay here to the other society else work at what they had an income from their employment in the form of high prices for their family supply products.

The result of this bring to focus under shows its extreme level in the case of the purchasing power of their money. They would find that although their had increased the number of their dollars they could buy but little more with them than they did before.

Then at the end of the membership outside the trades unions would be in a still more distressing plight, for they would encounter high prices wherever they went to buy anything. The result would be a forced reinvestment at recent high prices for the employer's goods, high wages for the workingmen, higher profits for middlemen, higher wages for the clerks and accountants of the middlemen, higher rents to landlords, the effect hitherto and yet unknown. In this, a high, dear community, and eventually a recent membership, it had to compete with other cities in which the prices had not been equally pushed up, as it would be subjected by all its cheaper competitors and have to trade bites away from it as a punishment of its greed and folly.

This does not end the list of evidences which showed wages in a city would cease. The agriculture classes outside the cities, who can't eat back and whose prices are fixed by foreign markets, must of necessity purchase less as prices of goods gone higher, because they cannot pay for them with their only agricultural products. They will decrease the farmer's demand for city work and merchandise, will close up thousands of shops and factories, throw multitudes of "Knights" out of employment, and leave them dependent on charity or tempted by want towards riotous practices. Turn the pretense of giving high wages for short work whichever way they may these are the results that will follow from it.

But some of their wages may these supporters will unhappily to the fleeting trades, because there is no outside competition, underselling, on sometimes business or buildings. The trades do not operate on the same line, but they are just as serious. The prices of coal buildings may advance so high that machinery will not economically operate. The demand for building does not all the rents of those already erected go up, and their owners a heavy charge upon for workmen. In every side the problem of giving much for compensate the more laborers difficulty, and is a argument to withdrawal that they really is actually. Perhaps some of their number may yet find some way to make wages high and labor hours short, and all the most have not advance the cost of production to the same proportion, which only puts one pocket and takes out of the other.

THE CITY APPROPRIATION BILL.

All the city departments have completed their estimates for the current fiscal year and have handed them in to the City Comptroller, who will submit them, with the recommendations, tomorrow night. The grand total foots up as per the appended:

Board of Public Works	$ 6,000,000
Police Department	2,000,000
Fire Department	1,000,000
Health Department	200,000
Board of Education	2,000,000
Total	$11,200,000

This makes a grand total of $11,200,000

There are other items in the estimates, such as appropriations for gaslight, sewers, etc., which will probably aggregate $1,000,000 or more, making a grand total of $12,200,000. During the interval added the school appropriation would be not subject to the 2 per cent limitation, from receipts $1,000,000 or be met by taxation, the city payment and future account. The largest item that can be counted on to come for city purposes is $6,000,000. The net total will probably fall $5,000,000 short of this estimate. The net receipts from licenses will not be much more than $1,000,000. The gross total last year was $7,000,000. It will be seen from these figures that the estimates must be cut down if the appropriations $7,000,000, even without reference to the school departments. An examination of the various items shows that this can be easily done.

The amount of the city for the coming year will be about half a million more than it was for last year. Of this increase about $250,000 is from taxes growing out of the increase of the assessment by the State Board of Equalization; the balance will arise from an increase in the valuation of Cook County. The city will in addition have about $500,000 for the building of two bridges, one at Clark and one at Fully avenue. This money the North Division Railway Company will pay, and the appropriation for the Department of Public Works authorizing one or two more is proposed. There is a balance in the credit of the Harrison street bridge portion of $200,000, and $250,000 worth of property can be obtained from the Pennsylvania Company for the galaxy. It is probable, then, that the Public Works Department can plead a further sum of $500,000.

Another place where the bulk can be used to advantage is the Health Department. Some $50,000 has been added to the estimates to buy more to cover the increase of fifty additional scavenger teams. The chief of the Health Department says that if this scavenger work is done by contract he can save $75,000 on last year's appropriations. The estimates can therefore be reduced $25,000 without detriment to the department. The Police Department asks for 150 additional men and some new stations to which to locate them. It is probable that the Superintendent will be glad to get one-half of the proposed increase; that will be all sufficient. There can be considerable economy in the scavenger, gas, and water appropriations also. The Committee will probably report in favor of reducing the Board of Education appropriation $250,000. It ought to be cut down that much at any rate.

Thanks to the 2 per cent limitation, the difference will be compelled to reduce the estimates to get within the city's resources. They will go as near to the revenue limit as possible. Had they the power they would vote all the money asked for, and more. The items are inadequate and some public men of repute who are constantly trying to break down the establishment themselves or to get control of it in some way, at any rate. The course of the Aldermen, last year, however, in taking up to the limit will always serve as a wholesome incentive to preserve the financial credit of the city and enable it to borrow money on the lowest possible rate.

THE VOTE ON SULLOWAY BILL.

With an exception or two sadly worthy of mention the Republicans who voted against the Lower House Immigration bill all came from a narrow strip of country along the Atlantic seaboard, with Boston and New York as the seats of influence and power. Those Democrats are the creatures of the Eastern plutocratic representatives of a few foreign corporations who own several billions of invested stocks and bonds, largely unissued. The Democrats controlled by the Eastern bond and mortgage holders and stock and corporation manipulators voted solidly against the bill, and up to the last moment they had the sympathy and support of a few renegade Irish from the plutocratic section of the State. Some of these unfortunate Western Senators got an very late hint in their attempts to have the bill unconstitutional and, as killed, for the present session, at least. They made any favorable move brought to bear the main question, but when there was no longer an opportunity to shift or evade the issue they took their positions and voted for the bill, but were swearing mad. All the population is in accord who the real men, and the people of the West are safely insured against with their Democratic representatives according to the way they votes were cast on that motion.

The fact that the motion to recommit could have been carried by a change of only six votes shows the strength of plutocracy in the Senate. The people of the nation may be get hold of the bill and have it strangled by delays in a conference committee, instead of defeating it at an open vote. Fortunately this scheme failed, and the friend of illegal learning at the West brought the recreant Democrats into line, and on the final vote the bill passed the Senate, and the conference report was agreed to, forty-three recognized Whigs were. Considering the determined secret as well as open opposition to the Senate the victory is a remarkable one and speaks well for the unity and patriotism of Senator Colton and the other faithful friends of the measure, and they may be congratulated on a triumph over formidable foes. They won only by meeting and beating every objection, inquiring of the exhibitors of the opposition, and putting the bill with unflinching determination until the final vote could be avoided on August Senator Colton and his associates deserve the highest credit for the great victory they have won in behalf of the people against the combined order of the great enemy of such gambling. New York and Boston. The bill now goes to the popular branch of Congress, where it will no doubt pass by a large majority, as plutocratic influences are weaker in the House and responsibility to the people more direct. The vote of the Senate and West will greatly overbalance that of the east and help bolting action along the Atlantic coast.

THE STREET RULES.

One of the duties of the Council authorities is to the effect that Streeter was compelled to clean out to the top the bygone stations, the stubs of which had accumulated upward 1,000 cases for thirty years without having been treated to anything in the shape of brooms or pitchforks. Such a task might well seem impossible, but the Streeter chose available was placed to tossing the Brown eighteen and Pearse through the same. It is not stated that the cars were swept out along with the accumulations filth, this being a matter of such minor importance as not to deserve special mention. But as a whole the operation is reported to have been an unbroken success.

Cook County has its bygone collection of dirt. It is located inside the City of Chicago, but the municipality is not responsible, as a corporate capacity, for its existence. The inducement to collect a tropical, but, whether called for that or any other cause, he offense is such enough to result in Streeter. The conclusion to the outcome of preceding years this, to say nothing of that now collected in several previous heaps of the Streeter, originally intended to be a place where the sick and wounded could be treated and served back to health and strength, it has been turned into a convenience for politicians and a storehouse from which to draw pay for the convenience of gamblers. The change was gradual, but original idea was to make of the institution an asylum and haven for following officials at the expense of the county. The sick and wounded were attended to, but now at these times he work was cleared for the sort. not as the attention was really work. This error was worked for all it was worth, but eventually proved troublesome, as the capacity of the institution grew to what it had no. The consequent duty to be taken was to turn out the patients, or keep them from coming in, as the case was needed for the benefit of those who were following on the public pleader. They preferred to the progress seems to have been adopted but so successfully that the place is becoming a hospital for workmen, cranks, and other afflictions, whose chief duties are ill-defined. So he is anxious to the scope of work which and be the most take care of those who. The philosophy that justifies the street is that those who cannot look out for their own interests deserve neither and for their own.

We submit that the case has arrived which this one of the points of Executive should be exercised. A harvest of popular indignation ought to be reaped upon the Cook County Hospital that will be strong enough to enable a clean sweep of the whole administration and to begin anew. The opportunity is not propitious to be abolished by any other method. It is not advisable to permit a scandal that such a wholesome punishment would not only be a public benefit but to also a public duty.

A SUPERIOR EDUCATIONAL INSTRUMENT.

The New York dispatches call attention to the fact that the New York Normal School or "College" is practically graduate with the many graduates, and that the gates to the medical doors are thronged with suitors. A similar state of things existed here in Chicago some time ago, and it exists still to a considerable degree though not here to any Normal School. Our Girls High Schools and the County Normal School turn out a couple of hundred "graduates" every June. Only 6 per cent of them are young women whose highest ambition is to become teachers. They are in the public schools. They meet the required examinations. There are going to be not more than fifty vacancies to be filled, and the young women have to "wait their turn." In the meantime dozens or more years. They will not go as cheap work. The position of teacher is looked upon as a genteel lighter to the quiet ones than dressmaker or shop-girl. They were trained for the teaching. Their parents scrimped themselves to keep them at school, and they must be using themselves after their graduate for a year or more to support them in idleness, and yet the wage-earning are not such desirable positions as may seem. The future by the patience, the nerves, and the health of young women to an extraordinary degree. There is probably not a week that some school-teacher does not leave the Chicago schools broken down in health. Rumors are current in New York. The society to get a place where there is only a surplus of applicants prices on the head and body of the young women. And it is not always the best deserving that succeed. Politics enters into the matter to a very considerable extent, because the school appointments are very often politicians. They are accessible to "influence." The Normal School has a very serious but perhaps not too serious view of the case of efforts to free York. "In turning out so many qualified for every vacancy in the public schools," it says, "the Normal College is doing more harm than good." This statement, to-day, is corroborated by those who are interested in the labor problem as it affects women.

It is to attention also to a move approved form of the society in Paris, but which is likely to be more gratified in New York, and it may be in Chicago.

In the Department of the Seine there are 1,200 young girls who are graduates of the Lycées or primary schools, who have been sent out as governesses, but cannot find employment in their profession. Many of them are the daughters of professional men, who have died poor. A society has been formed to find employment for them as governesses in families. Many of the girls have been sent to the provinces, and others to foreign countries, where they are in great demand. The society has also established a home for the girls, where they can live at a moderate cost while looking for employment. The scheme has been in operation for some time, and has been very successful. Many of the girls have found employment in families of the highest rank, and have given great satisfaction

Silks. Silks. Silks.

OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLIC.

CHICAGO, Saturday, Jan. 15, 1887.

Our Honest Silk Sale commenced Monday, Jan. 17th. Ever on the alert we have been waiting, watching our competitors' offers, that we might undersell them. Some time ago our agent purchased an immense stock of Silks at sixty cents on the dollar, owing to Eastern importer's entire need for cash, comprising the Colonel, Bonnet, Salon, Gravenard, Regatta, Faisan, and Parisian manufactures. All these are favorite brands.

We have marked down all our previous stock of SILKS to correspond, and distributed entire quantity into SEVEN LOTS. READ CAREFULLY. Lot 1 consists of Black Gros Grain and Rhadames at 65c; we have samples of same quality Silks, sold by our competitors at 90c and $1.15. THINK of THAT. We are thereby justified in calling our bargains "HONEST BARGAINS." Lot 2, Black Gros Grain Silks, Rhadames, etc., at 85c; agents' regular price was $1.00%. Lot 3, Black Gros Grain Silks, Rhadames, etc., at 98c; we have sold the same at $1.50. Peaus and COVERTS. Lot 4, Black Gros Grain Silks, Rhadames, etc., at $1.20; some of our neighbors advertise this as a SPECIAL BARGAIN at $1.97. Lot 5, Black Gros Grain Silks, Rhadames, etc., we will clear at $1.50. These are superb, and worth $2.25. Lot 6, Black Gros Grain Silks, Rhadames, etc., $1.75; usual wholesale price is $2.97, and at 60c on the dollar costs us $1.65. Lot 7, Black Gros Grain Silks, Rhadames, etc., at $2; fully worth $3.75 to $4.50; closes this remarkable, provable list of HONEST BARGAINS.

Only one word about Colored Silks. We have bought out a line of broken colors and swept the price down to 50c; worth 65c to $1.00. REMEMBER, the colors are not complete, but we can give you all you want in Wine, Burdeaux, Golden Brown, Myrtle, Sage, Slate, Robin's Egg, Plum, Olive.

THESE will not be sold to merchants; they are exclusively HONEST BARGAINS for the BENEFIT OF THE PUBLIC.

P. S.—These Silks are all guaranteed as advertised and warranted to wear. Anything purchased at this sale can be brought back at any time and money will be refunded cheerfully without the unnecessary hesitancy and vexatious red tape delays that are frequently met with in other stores, and if after six months' wear the Silk should cut or break, we will make the loss good. All orders by mail will receive prompt attention, and satisfaction guaranteed.

NOTE.—This Sale commences MONDAY, Jan. 17, and lasts until all are sold.

CHICAGO REAL ESTATE.

A WEEK WITH THOSE WHO BUILDERS AND DEALERS.

The Values of Foundations Who Large, and the Real-Estate Men Were Now Within Sight of Another Great Improvement—What the Spring Promises in the Way of Building—Review of Changes in the Wholesale Quarter—The Architects and Builders.

There was a fair sprinkling of conveyances and properties in the transfer lists of last week, but they were quite up exactly of this class. The bids to sell, of course, represent current business, but when the transactions of last week are examined it will be found that the trade was of the most desirable kind—bringing more than ever sought for. The aggregate was very large, which added that 300 brokers had a busy week. One broker reports that he sold $600,000 worth of property, and there was no single item which deserved special mention. This condition of affairs is very encouraging, particularly to one of the fact that the market was ever for present. The heavy capitalists were quite active, and some disappointment is expressed that they have not taken hold with greater avidity. There are a number of outside capitalists in town, but they are largely looking, and they complain when they are there is so little to exhibit. Improved property sells fast and good opinions on the prices asked for it, and that the rents here are risen proportionately to the prices. Part of these people have been induced into more speculation, though there are now perhaps the most prosperous factors in the business and dissatisfied to the other still more prosperous. It is here noted that, as referred to this week newspaper, it is not an exaggeration to say that a large number of the people who are looking here have already purchased in the suburbs and elsewhere, and that the bulk of those who have not already bought are only waiting for the purpose of selling property to buy in the suburbs. Many of the heads of the largest manufacturing establishments are among those who have already purchased property out in the suburbs, and are building for themselves. Many of the heads of the largest manufacturing establishments are among those who have already purchased property out in the suburbs, and are building for themselves.

TWENTY YEARS A JAILER.

HE TELLS RELATIVE INCIDENTS IN THE CAREER OF HIS LIFE AND WORK.

The Early Career as Watchman in the Old Cook County Court-House—A Jailer Under Sheriff Matt Kern—Executions of Murderers and Murder of County Prisoners—Chief Detective Sergeant Hughes on the Celebrated Anarchists—In an Early Chicago Settler.

"In 1860 I lost one of the highest offices in the gift of Mayor Tom Dyer, but it only put me in a position," said Mr. Conrad Fehr, chief bookkeeper in the Cook County Jail, who has served a period of over twenty years. "The position was that of a watchman and gateman in the belfry on the dome of the old Court-House building." Mr. Fehr continued, "and there was no use in Chicago who had as high a position when I was in the city. I often think of those early days in the same office. I was a young man, as I am now, and was full of energy and ambition and desirous to climb any ladder to a few stations, so I said, that night in 1860 that Chicago was then divided into six districts—two in each division. The first and second were on the South Side, the third and fourth on the West and the fifth and sixth on the North Side. I used a long telescope during the day, with which I could see pretty much all over town. If I saw what looked to me to be a fire over old west Lake, which was then a prairie, I would run down to the bell and ring it. Then I would go and hunt up the fire department and tell them where the fire was. This used to get a new coat and an extra dollar occasionally, for which I was always grateful, you bet. The first fire I ever saw was a barn on Lake street, near Halsted, which was burned down. I was then about fifteen years old, and was mighty glad to get the chance to see a fire. I used to run down to the engine house on Lake street, near Wells, and help the boys pull the machine to the fire. I was a great favorite with the boys, and they would let me help them pull the machine. I remember one time I was pulling away with all my might, when I fell down and the machine ran over me. I thought I was killed, but I got up and went right on with the boys. I was a great favorite with them, and they would let me help them pull the machine to fires, where I found them shortly afterwards. One of these boys still considers me one of his best friends, and we have had many a good time together. He is now living in Pittsburg and makes there and occasionally visit him.

CAPTAIN WOLF.

"I was then appointed by the County Commissioners of Cook County as watchman of the old Court-House, which position I held for four years. During that time I had charge of the building and grounds, and had to keep the fires going and look after the prisoners. I had a force of men under me, and was directly responsible to the sheriff of Cook County for the safe keeping of the prisoners. I remember one time when I was watchman I had charge of a prisoner named Dolan, who was sentenced to be hanged. He had a few friends who were anxious to help him escape, and one night, during a heavy storm, he made a break for liberty. He had a rope with him, and was climbing down the side of the building when I discovered him. I ran to the window and called to him to stop, but he kept on climbing down the rope. I then fired my revolver at him, but he still kept on. I then fired a second shot, which struck him in the leg, and he fell to the ground. He was then taken back to his cell, and I received a reward for my services. He is probably in the penitentiary at this writing, for all I know.

"I don't care to tell something, Mr. Fehr, of the Booth night in 1865 when the prisoners broke jail, but I will tell you that I was a witness to the hanging of Booth's pals, Payne, Atzerodt and Mrs. Surratt. I was on duty that day, and was one of the guards who had charge of the prisoners. I was also present at the execution of Captain Wolf, who was hanged for murdering prisoners during their transportation from Andersonville to Chicago. Wolf was a Captain in the Confederate army, and was in charge of the prisoners who were being brought to Chicago. He was hanged on a gallows erected in the jail yard, and after being brought from headquarters of the building to the gallows he was placed in a chair, which was carried by four men. I was present at the execution of Wolf, and I remember that he was a very large man, and one of the strongest men I ever saw. He

A NEW OPERA BY VERDI!

THE GREATEST EVENT IN MODERN TIMES IN THE MUSICAL WORLD.

Preparations in Italy for the Production of Another Work by the Composer of Aida—Scene at La Scala in Milan—Acting at Half Scale—Studies—The Leading Baritone—Some of the Airs in the Famous Antique—Not the Work Was Done.

The Milan stage, where the last opera of Gounod, the greatest of living composers, is to be produced, but at Italy is excited over the production of another work by the famous maestro. "Otello" is to be produced by Signor Verdi himself in point of its size, to the effect that it will contain "Ernanis," "Traviatas," "Aidas," possibly to avoid them to avoid offense. From Milan The Tribune has been able to receive the music of certain airs of the great work and, additionally, illustrations of the costumes of the various characters as they will appear at La Scala. From private sketch of H. Gigli, Rome (Sunday), the other extravagant in hair and the principal, an musical matters to a the art of costume, some also to correct of the opinions of the world in the eyes of the general world. Translations from a number of the newspaper devoted especially to the work are appended.

SIGNOR VERDI'S NEW OPERA.

Owing to the publication of Verdi's opera, Otello, to be performed at La Scala, Milan, on the 5th of February next, the following letter from Signor Faccio, the eminent conductor, to the editor of the Perseveranza, will be read with interest:

PLEASANTLY CHAT WITH HER CLOSEST FRIENDS.

Her Spanish Characteristics of Her Courtship and Approaching Marriage—Her Reticence of Spies and the Anarchists—Much Sympathy—How the Lucky Fellow Gets Her—Her Accomplishments—Her Views on the Impending Execution of the Five.

A Tribune reporter called yesterday afternoon upon Miss Van Zandt, the young lady who has achieved fame in the short space of seventy-two hours in consequence of her announcement of her approaching marriage with Captain Spies, the condemned anarchist now under sentence of death in the County Jail. The interview having the family consent, the reporter went to pay a visit to her home. After a conversation of some length with her and her mother, the reporter accompanied Miss Van Zandt to the jail. She experienced the fortune in intelligent conversation of the novel and sensational affair that has startled good and wise citizens of every section of the world.

It is extremely difficult to present to intelligent and truthful estimate of the young lady. It is the instinct to speak of all young women who become prominently prominent as "handsome" or "beautiful." In this case the fashion must be followed with a clear conscience, for the prospective bride is an extremely attractive woman, above 20 years of age, also in her way of graceful and rather striking carriage. She lives in elegant rooms, and apparently owns her home. Of course, in keeping with her position as the prospective wife of a man who is to be executed for murder, she is not in society, but she is not out

London, Sunday (New York Herald Cable.)—In Regent gleanings for the week—Lord Salisbury's career appears to be drawing to a close. Within the last few days the Premier has been the recipient of many letters from his friends and colleagues, urging him to resign. Lord Salisbury's health and the infirmities attendant upon old age are the principal reasons urged. The Premier's career has been a long and brilliant one, and it is generally admitted that he has earned the right to retire from the cares of office. Lord Salisbury has been Premier for three years, and has been in office for seven years out of the last eleven. He has been a leader in the House of Lords for twenty years. He has been a member of the Cabinet for twenty-seven years. He has been Foreign Minister for seven years. He has been Premier for three years. OFFICIAL EVENTS IN THE GAY WORLD IN WASHINGTON.

The Diplomatic Reception at the White House Under the Direction for a Week—Death of Democratic and Yankee Statesmen and Prince Rudolph in Boston—Fads Private Among the Rescues of the Week in New York—Doings from the Upper Circles of Chicago.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 25.—[Special.]—The event of the week was the diplomatic reception at the White House Thursday night. Before everything passed off smoothly and without any hitch every arrangement had been perfected to. The long corridors of the first floor were brilliantly lighted, and in every other room tropical plants and flowers in great profusion. The guests were received with form at the door and the large chandeliers glittered with electric lights. From 9:30 o'clock the diplomatic corps were received with Ambassadors, Ministers, Envoys, Secretaries, Attachés, naval and army officers, and other prominent people. There before the door was a basket of diamonds. Mrs. Secretary Hay stood with previous party, and it is said her diamonds cost $50,000. Mrs. Secretary Root was with a display in the White House except that made by Mrs. John Hay and Mrs. Frank Leslie was another lady whose diamonds attracted attention. The rooms she were to her own were the Secretaries stood which is such has been written. They looked the day of their usual. The entire floor of the Secretary's cottage was the scene of the greatest crowds. Every room was thrown open, and the rooms of the evening, or rather the hour of 9 o'clock, the throng of callers began to arrive. The lighting of the house, and indeed the entire grounds, was done by electricity. The Secretary's wife was assisted by Mrs. Secretary Root, Mrs. Secretary Hay, Mrs. Secretary Wilson, and Mrs. Secretary Moody. Mrs. Secretary Hay was dressed in white satin, with overdress of white lace, and wore diamonds. Mrs. Secretary Root was dressed in white satin, with overdress of white lace, and wore diamonds. STRONG IN HIS OLD AGE.

THE DIFFICULT LIFE OF THE FAMOUS EGYPTIAN, STEPHEN ARGYROPOL.

The Early Years as Translator at the Patriarch Anthimus's. What Gladstone Said Then When Duke Ernest Entertained the Duke of Edinburgh—An Anecdote Appropriate to Voting on When the Ancient Was the Party of Personal Appointment.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 15.—[Special Correspondence.]—Why are there comparatively so few Greeks? I suppose because there are very few Greeks who are afraid to starve an honest man. Nothing is easier than to keep the Turks of Stara Zagora away if they possessed all the other qualities of economy and efficiency, but the Greeks to all the grain from the Black sea—except with an interesting and picturesque style, etc. To write a good history a man must be able to spend his whole life on it, and that one ought to be as to Gladstone and long also, possibly the writing of history is favorable to longevity. It is not exactly years ago, during my stay in Berlin, that I had the honor to meet, in the very house and under the protection of Prince Bismarck himself, the late and lamented Leopold the Second, seventy-four and passed his 80th year, but still in the possession of perfect vigor of body and mind, busily engaged with the completion of his great and honoring work. One of the Greeks of our conversation was about the most active man amongst us, and he was pointed out to me as a living photograph showing the head of the old, white-bearded man of most striking and impressive appearance, snowy white hair and beard framing a fine, intellectual face—a face, once seen, never to be forgotten.

I did not learn at the time I asked who the Greek was I only would have an opportunity to see the original of this striking portrait, especially a conversation upon my first visit to Washington, I was meeting on a fine spring day from California acquaintance of mine, who was desirous of being an hour with the former of Athens and Rome—the Greek Argyropoli, or Argyropoulos—Professor of Byzantine Literature.

GENERAL ARGYROPOLI.

Kindly lent me the original of this striking portrait, especially a conversation upon my first visit to Washington, I was meeting my dear friend, Professor Argyropoli, whom I had met in the house of Johannes G. D. Ferris, whose beautiful Kentucky residence, built of a green, shining limestone, I admired but which I thought, in spite of its beauty, was not entirely in keeping with the style of the world around it. I consequently enjoyed a morning in such a grand lady as the Kentucky mansion, one of the foremost specimens of this world famous, I consequently enjoyed a morning in such a grand lady as this fine specimen of the second race, the most remarkable of this fine race of the human species—that is, the Greek—and, as all gentlemen, what is a Greek? Is he a native of Greece, speaking the Greek language? Is he a native of Greece, speaking the Greek language? Is he a native of Greece, speaking the Greek language

CHICAGO'S DOG BARBERS.

A TRADE WHICH HAS JUST ORIGINATED IN THE CRUEL MORNING.

Sketches of a Few of the Dog-Tonsorial Establishments of the Chicago Style for Canines to be Found—Shop Talk Here Are the Methods Governing Poor Fifteen Dollar Patrons.

There are a great many barber-shops in Chicago, among them some of the finest in the world, and among the latest are many well-known personages. Some of these dog-shaving shops are soon to be seen from Maine to Texas before the great fair. Nearly all, if not all, seem prosperous. It may be that in Chicago lower class dogs are treated better than in other cities. Chicagoans are usually in a hurry.

"If you are really going to see anything about barbers," said Mr. Eden, "you can not find here in the greatest dog in the world. I

CURIOUS FEATURES OF THE CLAIM OF MRS. JUDGE.

Eleven Charges Brought by the Wife of Chicago's Well-Known Jurist Against Him—A Study of the "Troubled Life"—Specimens of Those Quoted in Petition and the Reasons for Their Rejection—Portions of Testimony Now Forthcoming Promptly Struck Out.

"I don't believe he will," she added.

She was a good-looking young woman—for here, dashing a little hot coin and her hair, a single red rose to please some people, yet an undeniably good-looking girl for all that. She must have talked the counsel around with some dexterity to the supposition that the magistrate was a police agent sent to spy upon her, for she asked him if he was not a detective. Figuratively it was an hour of silence as I would stick. The court room quickly turned over the pile and those who knew, before hearing the interruption, "I did, Your Honor, after."

The young woman took her letters to the corner where the stenographer frequently threw him a little prodding with the pen that opened. Then as three people—one of them a reporter—rushed to her assistance. By the way, have you ever noticed how quickly people will rush to the assistance of a good-looking, unfortunate girl whom she knows?

In a minute or two she was on her feet again, her eyes flashing brightly through her tears from diamond and jewelry white. There was a suggestion of sarcasm in questioning about the girl. Her dark dress suggested it, and her pallid features and wan mouth, while its drooping corners gave proof of sore distress. By the way, the psychic enough a reporter or a female novelist ever see a face worthy of print in a two months, anyway?

The girl dismissed the idiocy lightly to her friends and turned herself upon the court. By the time the court was ready to hear cross, offering to call a cab. She quietly smoothed a tear, which, however, glistened, and said, "I should say so," and then answered with the air of a queen going to her throne.

After two or three questions, Mr. Barrett asked: "Have you ever had any trouble with your husband?"

"Yes, sir," was the answer, and the girl's face flushed, and she looked down at the floor. "I have had trouble with my husband ever since we were married."

"Have you ever had any trouble with your husband about money matters?"

"Yes, sir."

"Have you ever had any trouble with your husband about your children
